

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

WASHINGTON—Our United Nations allies, especially the British and the French, are complaining forcefully but diplomatically against the brusque manner in which the United States has handled Korea. And they are conducting truce talks at Panmunjom. They insist that seasoned diplomats represent the military representatives in an attempt to end the war for which they have served and have lost.

The backstage criticism is not directed so much at Harrison as it is at his superiors at Tokyo and Washington. The British and French are indicating, seven times a day, likewise, that the enemy's top delegate, is only a puppet. Both men simply receive and relay orders from their respective headquarters.

Ray Tucker, the American spokesman happens to be the target because he is the United Nations agent. Moreover, he is accessible to Anglo-French pressure exerted by their foreign offices and their diplomats at Washington, London and Paris.

There is no U. S. representative for the formal "city" atmosphere; but the servant of Moscow and Peking is immune to allied influence.

TIDEWATER VOTE NO "GIVE-AWAY" The states of California, Texas, Louisiana and Florida soon will gain legal title to any submerged lands lying off their coasts out to their so-called "historic" boundaries. And that means they will acquire certain rights to any oil found in these offshore areas.

Congress has approved the bill awarding title to the states, and President Eisenhower long ago said he would sign such legislation.

This is one of the most ticklish issues the lawmakers have dealt with in a long time, and there is no assurance it is now finally determined. The U. S. supreme court is still to be heard from.

Three times the high court denied state ownership claims to the offshore lands. The last time, however, it did not flatly assert federal ownership but said simply that the federal government had "paramount rights" in these areas. And it indicated congress could alter this status by adopting legislation handing the lands to the states.

The question now is whether the court will stand on this attitude, or take a firmer position against state ownership and in favor of federal.

The lawmakers have tried to anticipate this possibility by including a clause in the new law which assigns to the states the right to develop offshore resources (oil), even if their ownership of the submerged territory is denied.

In the event the law holds up in court, then California and Louisiana will own the lands out to their three-mile boundaries, while Texas and Florida will have possession for 10 1/2 miles out to sea. The treated under which these states came into the federal union set their ocean borders at this limit.

It is important to understand that this law does not extend either state title or state developmental rights to any additional lands except the beds of inland waters like lakes and rivers, where it was felt the ownership issue also had become clouded.

In other words, congress has not now given the states blanket authority to move into the vast public lands of the west and begin development of their resources.

These public lands are the foundation of the nation's great conservation policies affecting waterways, water power, forests, grazing areas, mineral resources and soil. Any assumption that the offshore oil bill is a precedent justifying new expansions of state authority runs directly athwart those general policies. And it seems wholly unwarranted, judging from the decided intentions of congress.

The major proponents of the offshore oil legislation were arguing a specific, limited case, claiming that treaties and other prior law clearly awarded the stated title to the lands out to their historic sea boundaries. They sought only verification.

It is not for the layman poorly versed in federal-state legal relationships to decide if they were right or wrong. But it is abundantly plain that they did not wish in this legislation to open the door to wholesale raids upon carefully conserved resources long held by the whole nation.

THE DEBATE GOES ON Before the U. S. Chamber of Commerce annual meeting in Washington recently, Secretary McKay denied charges that the Eisenhower administration was a "give-away" administration.

"We're not going to give away anything," he declared. "We're just as proud of our heritage, just as zealous in protecting our resources as anybody."

Following on the heels of the Hells Canyon policy declaration, however, Democratic spokesmen were preparing to intensify their cry that this was merely the first step of a gigantic give-away of natural resources.

It will be charged that the senate vote returning submerged lands mineral rights to the states coming on the same day the Hells Canyon policy was announced, marks only the beginning of an administration drive to liquidate the public domain.

President Eisenhower's campaign speech at Boise, Id., on Aug. 26 is being cited now as the "real" policy.

"Now we have a government that applies the philosophy of the left to government," said Candidate Eisenhower at that time. "The government will build the power dams, the government will do everything but come in and wash the dishes for the housewife."

Secretary McKay's new power policy announcement will be ticketed as in harmony with that statement, and the debate will go on endlessly.

INDUSTRY BEARISH A significant straw in the industrial winds is U. S. Steel Chairman Ben F. Fairless' statement to stockholders that in case a "wonderful new era of world peace, disarmament and progress" should develop, "America may no longer need, immediately, the new steel-making capacity that we have built in the past few years; and some of our facilities may be left to stand idle."

In other words, big industry is sounding bearish notes, in spite of Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey's New York speech beginning, "There is no reason to fear peace. We are not headed for a depression."

China; even if Chinese leaders should follow the example of Marshal Tito in Yugoslavia and break away from the Soviet Union.

Some of Radford's lieutenants, on the other hand, have started to have him say this policy would have to be pursued even if it meant a 50-year war against the Chinese mainland.

To those who have followed the Asia front line this was not unusual.

Many politicians in the latter category are far less realistic than Radford, clinging to the view that the Chinese are not a secret. The political repercussions of the JCS' policy are not a secret.

Radford's appointment, it is believed, will bring China into the war. The new chairman-designate of the JCS will naturalize and expand the war against the Chinese mainland.

U. S. Shortage on Scientists Related

WASHINGTON, May 15 (UPI)—President Eisenhower was warned today that national security in this country is endangered by a shortage of first-class scientific and technical, particularly physicists.

The 17-member national manpower council reported to the President that the United States has only about 155,000 trained scientists—two-tenths of one per cent of a working population of 65 million. It was estimated that there are between 15,000 and 20,000 scientists, of whom only 3,000 hold doctoral degrees.

Declaring this reservoir of scientific manpower was woefully inadequate, the council proposed a 14-point program to expand education of scientists.

Demo Leader Raps Cuts for USDA Budget

"WASHINGTON, May 15.—Rep. Harold E. Coster, Idaho Democrat, on the house agriculture committee, accused the Eisenhower administration of trying to wield "a meat axe on essential farm programs." The bill, which Coster said farmers "already have been frightened enough by this administration" and urged congress to take charge of the situation.

Coster for Fight

He spoke out as state Republicans and Democrats teamed up to battle the house economy bloc over an agriculture department budget. The bill authorizes $1.1 billion, 100 million dollars more for federal farm outlays than the Eisenhower administration asked. Voting on the bill, Coster said: "The bill is a good one."

The bill, estimated at $12,747,400,000, appropriates, a request of $8,942,088 over the Eisenhower budget, and loan authorizations amounting to $347,000,000, a boost of $40,000,000 over the Eisenhower budget. It also would authorize a 193 million dollar top limit on next year's farm subsidies for soil conservation practices, a boost of 140 million dollars over the 140 million dollar Eisenhower request.

Subsidy Issue

The fight centered on the consent of the 250 million dollars of the 250 million dollar authorization recommended by former President Truman.

Democrat Coster, however, was confident they could stop the economy forces led by John Baker, R. N. Y., from cutting it much further.

Rep. H. Carl Anderson, R. Minn., head of the agriculture appropriations subcommittee which drafted the bill, and Chairman Clifford R. Hope, R. Kan., of the agriculture committee, believed the house would make no big changes in the bill.

Army Reports Plan to Close Several Camps

"WASHINGTON, May 15.—The army plans to shut down Camp Breckinridge, Ky., and at least two more big training bases as a result of economy cuts, officials disclosed today.

The 10,000-airman training division, stationed at Camp Breckinridge, will be deactivated. The base, located on the other training bases to be closed, is expected the week. Among those currently being mentioned are Camp Roberts, Calif., and the two armored training division, and Camp Chaffee, Ark. base, and the fifth armored training division.

Smaller United Cutlery

is adding to its network of smaller training facilities in various parts of the country will be closed under Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson's plan to cut army costs. The 10,000-airman wings during the coming fiscal year, compared to 133 planned under former President Truman's budget.

Of the 22 wings to be eliminated, five would be taken from the strategic air command, the long-range atomic bombing outfit which has been the bane of U.S. relations with Russia. The others would be troop-carrier and fighter-bomber wings planned for army support.

The over-all drop in army strength will be about 100,000 men.

110 USAF Wings

The air force was hardest hit by the new administration's economy program. Informed sources disclosed over the weekend that the air force would cut 110 wings during the coming 1954 fiscal year, compared to 133 planned under former President Truman's budget.

Of the 22 wings to be eliminated, five would be taken from the strategic air command, the long-range atomic bombing outfit which has been the bane of U.S. relations with Russia. The others would be troop-carrier and fighter-bomber wings planned for army support.

M'Kay Approves Indian Payments

"WASHINGTON, May 15.—Interior Secretary McKay said today he has approved payment of more than $1,000,000 to the members of two Oregon Indian tribes whose fishing sites will be inundated by waters from The Dalles dam on the Columbia river.

McKay approved $4,150,000 for the Umatilla tribe and $1,940,000 to the Warm Springs tribe. Both payments must be approved by congress.

The agreement calls for payment by the U.S. government $200 to each of the tribes by Dec. 31, with the balance payable when the fisheries are flooded. Based on per capita payments, each of the 1,116 Umatilla and 1,000 Warm Springs tribe members will receive $3,542.42.

Angler Fined

"JULY 15.—Robert Cooper, Bismarck, N.D., of $250 fine to Justice of the Peace J. O. Estlin here Sunday after pleading guilty to fishing out of season.

Cooper was arrested by Conservation officers while fishing in the sagebrush area north of Bismarck Sunday.

RETURN HOME

"HAGERSTOWN, May 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Tom G. and their four children from a vacation in Meena, Ark., and Roseville, Ill.
